There was no miscarriage of justice in the case of absconder Walker, sent to prison for twenty years.

A man named Higen is likely to be the Hearst-party candidate for president; it sounds remarkably like Higen.

Herreshoff is a name to be reckoned with on land as well as sea for one bearer of it has walked off with a golf championship at Manchester-in-the-Mountains.

It is good news that Hughes will run again for the governorship of New York. The announcement is also interesting as showing that the New Yorker is losing some of his political coyness. In time he may be in the state of mind to come out openly and say that he wants to be president of the United States.

If the reports be true, the state firemen's association is deteriorating to a sad degree. Here is the testimony of the Middlebury Register, in whose town the last tournament of the association was held: "With all due respect to the officers and most of the membership of the association, it must be stated that this year's meet was not a success from every standpoint. While the crowd was not large, there was just enough of the rougher element along to detract from the real enjoyment and profit of the tournament. Internal dissensions, too, have evidently crept into the association, if only a part of the rumors are true, and the decadence of what naturally should be a most useful organization is apparent. It would be a distinct loss to the state if the association were to degenerate into a cheap junketing enterprise, and tournaments to exhibitions of uncouthness. Paid municipal fire departments have supplanted the volunteer companies in the large centers; but there is, and will be, a broad field for the volunteer fire departments. Nearly every year most communities see enough of the good work of the fire-laddies to appreciate them to the full. And it would be with a feeling of genuine regret that the public would note the decay or disruption of the state association."

AMERICAN ATHLETIC SUPREMACY.
Since the close of the Olympic games last week in London, the English sporting world has had to revise its opinions largely concerning American athletics, and, indeed, Americans themselves were agreeably surprised by the results attained by their representatives. That a brilliant victory has been won by the men who participated under the Stars and Stripes cannot be doubted, no matter how each nation may be inclined to score the meet. A very large majority of the points in the field events, which events alone were considered by the United States as properly belonging to the contest, were won by the American representatives. Another evidence of the undoubted superiority of the American athletes is shown in the table of records broken; there were nine records surpassed, and eight of the new marks were set by Americans.

But the point which causes English people to turn to a bit of self-inspection is the finer stamina displayed by their cousins across the ocean. It has always been the choice hobby in England that American athletes trained their participants to marvelous short bursts of speed or strength, but that when it came to endurance, English athletes were far and away superior. Take, for illustration, the Marathon run, the most trying athletic stunt known to modern times. The first four runners to finish, unaided, were Americans; the first Englishman was the twelfth in the line. Besides finishing at the head of the procession, the Americans were in comparatively good physical condition when they closed the terribly wearing contest. This event alone refutes the somewhat generally accepted belief heretofore that American athletes have less stamina, less endurance, than English athletes. Altogether, this last Olympic contest has necessitated a complete revamping of public opinion.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Cheap Advertising Scheme

The Glidden automobile tourists have come and gone. A very cheap lot of automobile drivers employed by the manufacturers, engaged in a very cheap advertising scheme! But the people insist on being humbugged—and why not by chauffeurs? And it's an event of a lifetime for the majority of the bugrimed mechanicians, to be lauded as heroes and ogled at by the ordinarily sedate and dignified maidens and matrons of the hamlets through which they whiz! But Rutland took the automobile manufacturers' advertising device at its proper value—and didn't make itself ridiculous.—Rutland News.

Two-legged vs. Four-legged Brutes.

There should be no retrogression or letting down of the bars by the next legislature in the matter of the slaughter of deer. On the contrary, the present law should be strengthened wherever possible. In fact, considering the gross and outrageous abuses of the open season week, there should be no open season for some years to come. No statute should tolerate such a week of unsportsmanlike debauchery as we have witnessed for the past two seasons. It is made the pretext for six days' carnival against all decency and humanity. Give the pitiable four-legged brutes ample protection against the mad thirst for blood of the two-legged ones.—Hartwick Gazette.

A Hustling Campaign.

An energetic and decisive campaign is always the most effective and the newspapers of the State are manifesting a disposition to do their part toward making the present gubernatorial campaign effective. The Northfield News says:

It is understood that the republican State committee purposes to make a short, sharp and decisive campaign, with the expectation of rolling up a big majority in the September election, that will set the pace for the republicans in the November elections in every State in the Union. It is expected that Presidential Candidate Taft will deliver two speeches in the State early in August. The republicans of Vermont can do the greatest service to their party by a big vote in the coming State election.

We understand that with the opening of the coming week Chairman Williams of the State republican committee will open the department of publicity, and that the way will be thoroughly prepared for the speaking campaign which will closely follow, with rousing rallies well toward the close of the canvass, to include speeches by Former Secretary Taft and Governor Hughes. It is expected, however, that local speakers, of whom Vermont boasts a considerable number, will bear the brunt of the work on the stump.—Burlington Free Press.

Facing Another Labor Trouble.

The I. P. paper company and its employees have been at the bottom of all the labor troubles that ever afflicted Bellows Falls, and the end is not yet apparently. Some time ago notice was served on the president of a papermakers' union with which the employees of the I. P. company are affiliated that a ten per cent reduction in wages would take effect either on July 25 or August 1; at least that is the way the local employees of the company understand it. These employees have voted to leave the mills if the cut is put into effect. We are informed that the employees in every mill of the I. P. company have voted to resist the cut to the last ditch. This means that if the company makes the cut 250 employees or thereabouts in the local plants will join employees in other plants in a strike and loss to the company, to the employees, and to the community. The employees, and to the community will follow. It is sincerely to be hoped that the company will not find it necessary to make the cut. If however, the cut must be made for the present, an agreement to restore wages at a specified time might have a mollifying effect on the strike spirit. The local employees of the company have chosen Daniel Brown and David Senecaugh to represent them at a conference with the officials of the company in New York this week and it is thought that some satisfactory agreement may be arrived at and a strike averted.—Bellows Falls Times.

Vermont's Forestry Interests

Notice recently appeared in these columns of a forestry conference of much possible significance for Vermont's betterment. It was convened for the consideration of the forestry conditions and needs of the State by the Governor and the gentlemen selected by him to represent Vermont at the White House conference on the preservation of national resources, the State Forestry commission and the officers of the Forestry Association of Vermont.

After the report of the Governor and his committee as to their ideas gained at Washington, there was general discussion which revealed the unanimous opinion that there is urgent need for a larger development along the lines of forest protection and other phases of scientific forestry in Vermont, and that this should be primarily under State rather than National auspices.

One immediate outcome of the conference was the appointment of a committee authorized to formulate specific recommendations and to bring these to the attention of the people of the State and next Legislature. The following gentlemen constitute the committee: The Hon. J. A. DeBoer of Montpelier, the Hon. Ernest Hitchcock of Pittsford, the Hon. A. M. Fletcher of Cavendish, and the Hon. C. C. Pitts of Brattleboro, with Prof. L. R. Jones of Burlington, president of the Vermont Forestry association, ex-officio chairman. The recommendation of a committee so constituted will be awaited with keen interest and with assurance that it will have only the welfare of the State as its motive. Public sentiment as represented by utterances of the press and otherwise is clearly and strongly behind any movement looking to the permanent betterment of Vermont's forests. Inasmuch as two-thirds of the State is destined by nature for permanent timber land and the otherwise management is a matter of tremendous significance.—Burlington Free Press.

MONTPELIER

Veteran Bear Hunter Finds a Dead Deer in Pasture.

Charles Colley, the veteran bear hunter of Berlin, has reported to Game Warden H. O. Kent that he has found a dead deer lying in his pasture. It is believed the animal was struck by a Central Vermont train and crawled in to the pasture to die.

Mrs. Corilla C. Atherton, of Waterbury and Mrs. Myron Graves of that town have been granted widow's pensions of $12 a month.

Harlie H. Bates pleaded guilty in city court Saturday morning to a second offense of intoxication. He had no money and was given a straight sentence of 30 days in county jail.

The funeral of Miss Stella Buchanan will be held this afternoon at two o'clock from her late home on Wheelock street, the Rev. A. J. Hough officiating. Miss Buchanan died Saturday morning with consumption after an illness of a few months, aged 24 years.

The funeral of Mrs. E. J. Ennis was held Saturday afternoon from her late home in the opera house block. The Rev. A. J. Hough officiating. Burial was in Green Mount cemetery. The bearers were Howard J. Harold E. and J. A. Ennis, B. A. Montgomery, Murray Donaldson and Cortez Foss.

Capt. Alma M. Ashton and Lieutenant Lankton, who have been in charge of the Salvation Army headquarters in this city since last November, will bid farewell next Sunday evening and new officers will be sent here to take their places. Capt. Ashton is to be married next week to Fred E. Gates of this city. Both these earnest workers will remain in Montpelier as members of the local corps.

Local Contractor Gets Work.

Bellows Falls, July 27.—The building committee of the Carnegie library met Saturday and let the contract for the construction of the library building to J. D. Cote, a local contractor, who bid $13,790. There were a dozen or more bids, ranging from $21,000 to Cote's figures. The building will be of roman brick with artificial stone trimmings. The extra cost for heating, electrical fitting and plumbing will leave the cost within $18,000.

The sum of $1,000 has been received by the Barre Congregational church from the Byron Somers estate in New Mexico, and $1,500 for the cemetery.
